Games To-Morrow. Lynchburg at Danville. Richmond at Portsmouth. Roanoke at Norfolk.

With every man save one making one or more hits off the recently secured pitcher, Perdue, Richmond won yesterday afternoon's game from Lynchburg by the score of 7 to 1. The locals made thirteen hits, as against two for the visitors, and it was by bunching them at the proper time that the Lawmakers got in their seven tallies. It was a hit and run game. Revell was in splendid condition. He pitched a masterly game, allowing only two hits—one of them a scratch—which came in the eighth inning. Up to that time it looked as if it might be a no-hit game.

A tremendous and enthusiastic crowd witnessed the contest, and Revell received round after round of applause for his superb work. When, in the third inning, he lined out a two-bagger, the visitors were unable to touch him until the eighth, but neither of the hits helped in the run-getting. Enthusiasm was at a high pitch up to the last inning. Richmond rooters standing loyally by their team. They cheered every run and every hit, and, perhaps, it was this fine and unstinted enthusiasm and backing that urged the locals on to their best. In the hitting line they showed up in splendid form, though several sad errors were made in the fielding. Danville fumbled at third base, and Ison fumbled two at second, one of them going right between his legs into center field. Revell made a wild pitch, as did Perdue, but it did not count against him as far as the scoring went. After he made one in the sixth inning, when it came at an opportune time for him.

Flashback Danville's Score. While Richmond was walking off the field with Lynchburg, there was flashed on the score-board the story of the first game between Danville and Norfolk. It went on for two innings, when the final inning was put up, where everybody could see, enthusiasm was unbounded. Richmond had forged ahead by one more game, and Danville had fallen back. But the Tobaccoconists won the second game, which was played at Danville, and when it was learned afterwards, the grandstand was packed to its utmost capacity; the bleachers were filled, and there were many lining the northern and western extremities of the field. All were intensely interested. One white-haired rooter in the grandstand rose to his feet when Revell knocked out his two-bagger, and led the cheering. He forgot his years, and never thought for a minute that for a trifling moment all eyes were turned from Revell, sitting on his sack, to him.

He pulled off his hat and yelled as he must have done years ago when with a paddle he knocked a rubber ball over the schoolfield fence. It was an illustration of the intense interest which the Richmond rooters are now displaying for their team, more than earnest desire they have to see their favorites carry off the pennant. Everybody recognizes in Danville a foe to be reckoned with until the last day of the season, and the closer the percentages the greater the excitement. At this time it might be a war between worlds, or a contest between nations, so great is the unstinted loyalty. Anyway, Richmond is still in the lead, and if the hopes and prayers of many thousands can count for anything in the final ending—the climax—the denouement, or what you will—then Richmond's team deserves to win, and its backers the intense satisfaction of seeing the pennant flying far once over the grandstand of the Broad Street Ball Park.

Lynchburg came to bat first. Byrd flew out to Sieber on a long, high fly, and Bowen knocked a stinger to Liep. The Richmond third baseman fumbled the ball, and Bowen got his base. Schuman followed and sent one direct to Ison; he let it go by. Hooker got his base by waiting, and the bags were full. Then Sweeney, realizing that much depended on his efforts, bunted to Revell and was put out at first. But Bowen had crossed the plate, and one run had been scored. Ison, who had been on first, did not gain a foothold on first. It was a shut-out for the rest of the game, the visitors being entirely unable to land on Revell's assortment of curves until the eighth inning, when they landed twice. But two men had already gone out. Young singled and Sweeney's drive to center field, which left two on bases, Wallace gave Ison another chance, and his light was extinguished on first.

Two Nervous Rounds. Richmond fared badly in the first two rounds, having landed twice on the imported twirler. In the third, however, things took a change for the better. Revell walked up, and after getting two balls, lined one out to deep left field. Liep followed him, but while the manager was waiting at the plate Revell moved too far from second, and Westlake surprised him by throwing suddenly, and caught him asleep at the switch. Then Liep swung at one and drove it out to left. Kanzier was thrown out, pitcher to first; but Stinson, the always valuable Stinson, lined a two-bagger out in Wallace's direction, and Liep, crossing the plate, evened up the score. Sandherr followed with another double-sacker, and scored Stinson. Then Titman singled into center field and scored his predecessor. He stole second, and reached third on Bowen's error. But Ison spoiled his chance by sending a grounder to short.

The fourth session passed without incident, and in the fifth the Lawmakers again took a turn at the bat. Kanzier, first man up, singled, and Stinson, sacrificing, reached first on Kirkpatrick's error. Sandherr advanced the runners by sacrificing, and Titman drove one out into deep right field, scoring Kanzier. Ison retrieved himself somewhat by sending a grounder to Wallace, and scoring Stinson and Titman. Sieber flew out to first. The score was, Richmond, 6; Lynchburg, 1. But there was still a chance for the Lynchburgers, and the locals did not let up on their battling.

Clinched in the Seventh. The game was clinched in the seventh inning, when the seventh and final tally was made. Kanzier led off with a two-bagger into left, and came home on Stinson's single. Stinson was caught at second, and Sandherr flew out to Hooker in center. Titman got to first on a fielder's choice, stole second, and arrived at third on a wild pitch. But Ison queered his chances by grounding out from second to first. But it was enough, and team and rooters were satisfied. The eighth inning was won by the three men going out in order. Revell allowed two hits in the eighth against him, but they did not count.

Though the locals made five errors, and the visitors four, the game was exceedingly interesting. Revell clearly outclassed his rival, who was lamed at will all over the field. Ison made two bad fumbles, though both were rather hot. The Lawmakers made four two-baggers, the honors going to Revell, Stinson, Sandherr and Kanzier. The score: Richmond, 7; Lynchburg, 1.

This Is How the Icelanders Do Their Mat Work Stunts

For many years Icelandic wrestling was not only peculiar to Iceland, but was kept a secret. No foreigner was permitted to see it, and during the whole of the last century, the only occasion upon which strangers were allowed to witness a display was when King Christian IX. of Denmark was at Thingvellir in 1874. Then only two men took part, both of them clergymen. In its original form, the stout leather "grip" (clearly seen in the photographs), which are now used by the clubs, were not provided, and a grip was taken of the clothing in the usual manner. The majority of the grips were formed by the feet and legs, so that if the hands are tied (a thing usual in the game), a fair resistance can be offered, no matter from what side the enemy attacks. The game is practically as it was in the eleventh century, although a few manoeuvres have been added and a few have been discarded.

Takes First Game by Hard Hitting—Tobaccoconists Turn Tables in Second Contest.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] DANVILLE, VA., August 22.—Norfolk took the first half of the double-header here to-day by batting Loos all over the lot, and as a result of his wild throw, and several others made behind him. Danville had an easy thing of the second contest, hitting Savage for fourteen hits, nineteen bases, Walker, for Danville, allowed only two measly singles, which could be termed scratch hits. He had the visitors completely at his mercy, and only one man got as far around the circuit as second base. Three home runs by Jackson, Henn and Powell, featured the two games.

In the first game, Loos pitched a steady game up to the fifth inning and had the Crew blanked, when they landed on him for four hits, a home run by Jackson, a double by Rhynder and singles by Fox and Edwards, which netted four runs. A wild throw by Loos had previously let in three runs. After this inning Kline pitched the game, but he was put in too late. Six hits off him and three errors let in his four runs.

Fox, while allowing ten hits, was

ADDED STARTER WINS EMPIRE CITY HANDICAP

Pinkola, Piloted by J. Butler, Captures Rich Event From Fine Field of Handicap Horses—Though Run in Mud, Good Time Was Made—Frank Gill Runs Second.

NEW YORK, August 22.—If the weather had been pleasant to-day probably 20,000 persons would have seen the running of the $15,000 Empire City Handicap, one mile and a furlong, at the Yonkers track. As it was, in spite of the heavy rain and the poor transit facilities, nearly 10,000 were on hand to show their appreciation under the most trying conditions, of James Butler's enterprise and liberality. The track was heavy, but by the time the horses came out of the paddock for the big race the soil was drying rapidly under the rays of a warm sun. The $15,000 event drew a fine field to the barrier. Frank Gill was the favorite at 3 to 1, with Tilling at 7 to 2, and the others, except Gown, at comparatively short places. W. H. Fizer's three-year-old Pinto, who won the Midsummer Stakes on Friday, was an added starter, and was quoted at 5 to 1. He ran a magnificent race and won, aided by the masterly riding of Jim Butler, the new jockey star.

Coming into the home stretch it was anybody's race. King James leading, with Jack Atkin, Beacoup, Pickola and Gretna Green, close together, and all running gamely. When Butler drew away and won by a length and a half in 1:54 4-5.

Frank Gill, under a rather weak ride loomed up just then with a wonderful rush through the stretch and nailed the place from the leg-weary King James by a head. King James was a Vail made his last appearance in a local uniform, and pitched phenomenal ball, allowing but one hit, and it was of the scratchy variety. Reynolds was in good form, but the Truickers bunched their six hits, earning a total of 10 runs, and two in the sixth. The errors of the visitors were harmless. The game was clean, snappy and fast.
